Do You Know . . .

Tailor a first aid kit to fit your family's particular needs. Assemble in a suitable, labelled box so everything will be handy when needed. Label everything clearly and indicate what it is used for. Don't lock the box so you will not have to hunt for the key when an emergency occurs. Place on a shelf beyond the reach of small children. Check it periodically and restock items as soon as they are used up. Have someone call for medical assistance while you apply first aid. Have them explain the nature of the emergency and ask what should be done pending arrival of the ambulance. Look for an emergency medical identification card or emblematic device victim may be wearing to alert you to any health problems, allergies or diseases that may require special care.

MORE THAN JUST A GREEN PRODUCT

Trodat is proud to introduce a new line of stamps called “Ecoprinty”. These self-inking stamps are made from 75% post-consumer recycled material (excluding transparent parts, pad and dieplate) which help to reduce the amount of plastic waste going into landfills. However, these new stamps represent just one of the many environmental initiatives Trodat has put into action. As a global supplier to over 160 countries, Trodat had recognized this corporate responsibility many years ago and made energy conservation a top priority.

Here are a few measures Trodat has taken over the last decade:

- About 80% of production waste is recycled
- Trodat stamps are produced with no harmful materials such as zinc, cadmium, lead or PVC
- 62% of electricity requirements come from renewable energies (ie: water)
- Reduction of 1,000 metric tonnes of CO₂ since 2001 by reducing fossil fuel consumption.

After integrating these and other initiatives into manufacturing, we have been awarded the internationally recognized ISO 14001 environmental certification.

Consumers of Trodat stamps can be confident that the product they have purchased was manufactured responsibly. For further details on Trodat’s environmental initiatives, please visit www.environment.trodat.net

Do You Know . . .

Both pre-inked and self-inking stamps are cleaner and make faster, more consistent impressions than old fashioned rubber stamps. A pre-inked stamp has the ink reservoir behind stamp. A self-inking stamp uses a tiny built-in ink pad to re-ink itself for each impression. Pre-inked stamps are best for intermittent use. They require a rest for re-inking after several impressions, and work on porous surfaces only. Self-inking stamps are best for stamping large quantities quickly and for heavy, rough use. They can be used with a variety of inks, including quick-drying inks for glossy surfaces. They are generally less expensive and do require periodic re-filling of their built-in ink pads.

Choosing the right Surge Protector

Protect your equipment investment with surge protectors for your telephone lines and coaxial cables.

Why do I need a surge protector?

A surge protector protects your sensitive electronic devices from power-disturbance damage by absorbing excess energy, much like a sponge absorbs water.

Is it important to protect my telephone line?

Yes. Surges can enter your home or office through telephone lines to harm and even destroy sensitive electronic devices, including your computer and stored data. Using a surge protector with telephone-line protection is the only way to properly ensure the safety of your telecommunications devices.

Why do I need coaxial-cable protection?

Electrical surges can also enter your home or office through the coaxial-cable lines. A surge protector with coaxial-cable protection provides the only way to ensure the safety of your audio video equipment and cable modems.

Why is the joule rating important?

A joule is a measurement of energy. The higher the joule rating, the longer lasting your protection.

UPS (Uninterrupted Power Supply)

Keep the power going with a UPS system and avoid costly data loss and computer damage.

What is AVR?

Automatic Voltage Regulation (AVR) technology provides clean electricity by increasing low, or decreasing high voltage, keeping it within a safe range of 110 to 120 volts. Battery Backups (with AVR) automatically switch to battery power if line voltage drops below 85 volts or exceeds 130 volts.

What are the typical power disturbances?

Blackout

Sudden and complete loss of utility power lasting for an extended period of time.

Average Frequency:
Occurs five times a year.

Brownout

Short-term decrease in voltage levels. Brownouts can cause frozen computer keyboards and unexpected system crashes.

Average Frequency:
Occurs five times a day.

Overvoltage

Or "spike" is a significant increase in voltage. A spike can enter through AC, network, serial, phone or coaxial lines and can damage or completely destroy components.

Average Frequency:
Occurs five times a day.

Compare your levels of power protection.

Without battery

No backup protection.

Battery backup

Provides blackout and surge protection.

Battery backup with AVR

Provides complete protection from ALL power disturbances.

Blackouts, brownouts and voltage fluctuations can cause data loss and equipment damage. Choosing a battery backup with AVR lets you keep your electronics running when the power goes out.
